BENEFITS OF AN INTERNATIONAL EXPERIENCE
For students in Spanish, an international experience can be an integral component to the discipline. Upon return from studying abroad, many students report that they are equipped with greater language proficiency, deeper knowledge and understanding of various cultures, as well as a broader, more global perspective that is often valued by employers.

ACADEMIC & TIMING CONSIDERATIONS
All three tracks (General, Literature & Culture and Linguistics & Philology) of the Spanish major include three core courses, a grammar course (3010 or 4010, depending upon departmental placement), Texts & Interpretation (SPAN 3300), and at least one survey course (SPAN 3400-3430). In order to count for the major or minor, these courses must be taken at UVa or in a program recommended, not merely approved (see above), by the Spanish Department.

- Students who study in a recommended program may count up to 15 credits per semester of study abroad or 24 credits per year of study abroad toward their Spanish major.
- Students who study in an approved program in Spain or Latin America may count up to nine (9) credits for a semester of study abroad or 15 credits for a year of study abroad toward their Spanish major.
- Students may count up to nine (9) credits of study abroad toward their Spanish minor.

STUDENT TESTIMONIAL

I studied abroad my entire third year at UVA, my fall semester in Buenos Aires and my spring in Valencia. Beyond the obvious opportunities afforded me by my study abroad experience—like achieving fluency in a foreign language, completing my Spanish major, and playing tourist in uncharted territories—study abroad was perhaps most instrumental in forcing me outside of my comfort zone to confront new experiences, persons, and ways of thinking. It was good, bad, awkward, weird, amazing, instructive, frustrating, happy, unsettling, and fulfilling all wrapped up into one. It was a kaleidoscope of experiences.

-Ilona de Zamarozcy, NYU in Argentina and UVA in Valencia
