To: UVA Students Traveling Abroad for University Related Purposes – Fall 2021
From: Dudley J. Doane, Director & Catarina Krizancic, International Health, Safety, and Security Manager
Re: Health, Safety, and Security Abroad

Student international travel for university related purposes remains restricted. However, thanks to improved health and safety conditions in several countries, greatly expanded access to COVID-19 vaccines, robust on-site program support, and careful student planning, just over 130 students and GME trainees will travel abroad for university related purposes during the fall 2021 semester.

UVA has an emergency and communications plan that includes the services of an emergency assistance provider. We subscribe to security intelligence services which furnish us with regular and emergency updates on health, safety, and security conditions around the world. We are also members of the Overseas Security Advisory Council (OSAC), a division of the Bureau of Diplomatic Security in the U.S. Department of State, and PULSE, a professional association focused on health, safety, and security in university operations outside the U.S. UVA students and GME trainees who travel outside the borders of the United States are subject to the University's Policy on Student International Travel. All students and GME trainees, along with the faculty and staff who advise them, are expected to comply with the requirements of the policy, which include registration of the travel and enrollment for international health and emergency assistance insurance for use during the time abroad for university related purposes. The ISO recommends that travelers also consider trip insurance that can be tapped in the event that travel to or from the education abroad destination is interrupted or in the event that a change in itinerary is required.

Pre-departure, please stay well informed of events in your destination(s) and the surrounding region(s) and encourage family members and others interested in your time abroad to do the same. This will help you prepare for your sojourn and begin the engagement with your new environment. U.S. Embassy web sites are good sources of information on all aspects of host country conditions as is the U.S. Department of State travel site (www.state.gov/travel/). U.S. Department of State Travel Advisories, Centers for Disease Control Travel Notices, U.S. Department of Treasury Sanctioned Countries, and University Travel Restrictions can be accessed at <http://iso.virginia.edu/travel-alerts-notice-warnings>. This is also a good time for you and your family to review the ISO's Health & Safety Abroad web page, the Education Abroad Handbook, and the University's Policy on Student International Travel.

During the COVID pandemic, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) remains the central U.S. clearinghouse for individual and public health guidance, including for international travel, and all travelers should keep current with U.S. border policies for re-entering the United States (Department of State COVID-19 Travel Guidance for U.S. Citizens, last updated May 28, 2021).

While you are abroad it is important to practice situational awareness, maintain a low profile, communicate proactively, and attend to updates from your hosts, local authorities, and the nearest U.S. Consulate. The U.S. Consulate will also be your best resource for staying abreast of local laws and policies as they affect U.S. visitors during the COVID pandemic. Make sure that you have contact information for emergency assistance in your destination(s) – local equivalent(s) of 911, your international health and emergency insurance provider (generally CSI), your program/university/local host, and the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate.

You and your family are welcome to direct questions to the International Studies Office (ISO). Please note that in the event of an emergency, the ISO can be reached 24/7 at +1 434 982 3010. Those of you enrolling at one of our exchange partner universities or in a program offered by an organization such as IES or SIT should feel free to direct your questions to the host university or study abroad organization. Your time abroad is likely to be both exciting and challenging – a unique opportunity to learn more about the world and yourself. Good preparation pre-departure and mindful behaviors while you are abroad will help you gain the most from it.
